

Tamara Hancock is the stay at home mother of 5 children. She owns and operates her own small business decorating wedding cakes, creates freelance websites, is an author, and a Virtual Administrative Manager. She is also the founder of www.wahpm.com - a website and newsletter geared towards support and strengthening of other stay at home and work at home moms. She is also author of the book "Confessions of a Stay At Home Mom", a realistic look at the feelings and concerns most mothers experience.

In addition to the site, Tamara is also an author and speaker focusing on uplifting the Work at Home and Stay at Home Mom. Her talks inspire others to be the best they can. Tamara teaches that it's okay to not be perfect in everything you do, and that it's okay to lean on others for help and support. As strong entrepreneurial women (and men), we all want to do it all - as human beings, we are subject to limitations. Tamara helps everyone to know that limitations are not roadblocks, but openings for opportunity - another chance to shine.

Tamara lives in Phoenix, Arizona with her husband and five children. She enjoys baking, scrapbooking, writing, and knitting - although admittedly she doesn't do much recreational relaxation at the moment.
